“ You all have my deepest condolences. Although I haven't seen Swinton in many years I still recall him with great affection from when I worked at my father's business. He was always very engaging and kind to me - enduring good natured ribbing from the other men for "buttering up the boss' son" and always eliciting from me the promise of giving him a raise when I took over the business. I looked up to him, just as he and Ocee and Shorty looked after me. And they remain a big part of the fond memories I have of working with my father. Sincerely, John Chitwood
